“It’s obviously a time in our culture right now where we’re using things to divide people,” Nothard says. The museum wanted to name it [the Mending Wall], which we thought was a good idea, and it finds a way into our discourse right now.” Nothard sees the mirrored elements as a way of reminding people about ‘our relationship to the environment and ourselves and the universe,’ she says. ‘I feel like this tiny little sliver of space and culture and environment really does have a lot of loaded experiential aspects.’”
